Last January Miss Ludiam, a daughter of foward Ludiam, of 294 Clinton avenue, President of the People's Gaslight Company and a director in the Wallabout Bank, west to New Brighton on a visit. She was asked if she knew Mr. Whyte, "the wealthy Brooklyn banker." She had heard of Whyte as a friend of Mr. Palmer, and knew that he was only receiving a small salary. Therefore, the stories of his mode of living were a great reveisation, and upon returning to Brooklyn she told her father the whole slery.

Mr. Ludiam notified President Charles M. Engles of the facts, and he, in turn, communicated with the Guaranty Company of North America, at 111 Broadway, New York, which guaranteed Whyte's housety to the exient of $10,000. Detectives were put on his track, and it was soon learned that his large expenses were not paid with money received frem England.

Wells asserts that an American gentleman backed him to the extent of £10,000 ($50, -000) for his operations at Monte Carlo, tha through a rear window. They at once went to work at the safe and soon blew it to pieces with dynamite. They se-cured $50 in cash and a quantity of Yachts, on which he intended to display hit nventions.

Wells stated that he did not wish to dis close the name of the American who had risked so much on his luck and skill as cured $50 in cash and a quantity of stamps, in all not more than $200.

They left their tools on the floor of the post-office and then went to the car-shop of the Harlem Railroad Company near by, which they broke open, and secured a handcar.

They left town on this handcar, and reports from along the Harlem road say the burgiars were seen passing through Pleasantville, going south, at about 4 A. M. They were also seen passing through Chappaqua. It is supposed that they managed to reach White Plains and boarded the 5.5 train for New York. The handcar was found abandoned a short distance north of White Plains.

The robbery was not discovered until W. I. Haistead, the Postmaster, and his clerks opened the post-office at 6.50 this merning. The post-office which is a one-story frame building, is located about 150 feet from the Harlem Railroad station.

owns the burying ground, but the case was decided in favor of the city. Then the Trinity Corporation petitioned the Board to reconsider its action. A hearing was given on this petition to-day and the board decided unanimously to stand by its original action.

Stephen P. Nash, for the Trinity Corporation, declared that the people in the vicinity would have use of the ground as a park under arrangements which the Corporation contemplated. Their plan embraces the building of a new church, and the laying of walkes between the graves, and benches would be placed in that portion where there are no graves.

Civil Justice Wanhope Lynn and Assemblyman Walker, who have been agitating the matter for years, opposed Mr. Nash's plan. Justice Lynn said the course of the Corporation was dictated by a desire to save the expense of moving the boiles, and because the property it owns in the vicinity would be assessed for the improvement.

Justice Lynn said if the Trinity Corporation did not remove the bodies, they would remain there. He added there were 2000 bodies te-day in Washington Square, and where the City Hall stands some of the bones of the old Knickerbockers may possibly be found. A Fiery Monster Which Leaves operation on Lillie S. Cook, of Debevoise place, Brooklyn. He was sentenced to a term of three years

Now that President Cleveland has recalled the treaty and the members of the Union sleague have rejected the report by a decisive vote at the meeting held last night, the Committee on Political Reform feels that it has been most ignominiously sat upon.

When the report was presented last night E. B. Hindsdale, the Chairman of the Committee, made a speech in favor of the adoption of the resolutions proposed. A number of members spoke against it, and when a vote was taken it was found that there were only thirty members of the 100 present who stood in with the Committee on the americal of the 100.
